

FATHER USES CHILDREN AS HORSES

UP IN WISCONSIN—HE GUIDES THE PLOW.
NEARLY ALL ARE GIRLS.

Oskosh, Wisconsin, May 26.—Complaints have been made against a farmer living near Nenah that he has been hitching four of his seven children to a plow and compelling them to drag the implement through a ten-acre truck garden, while he guided the plow and drove as he would drive a horse.

This sensational complaint is founded on facts, as neighboring farmers and persons from Oskosh, riding along the highway, have witnessed the cruel practice. When the attention of the authorities was called to the matter, Dr. Wilkie, agent of the Fox River Valley Humane Society, went to the farmer and compelled him to send five of the children to school. Of the seven children, five were of school age, whom the farmer, it is alleged, was rearing in ignorance. None of them was able to read or write. The majority are girls. The oldest one, and one who was hitched to the plow, is not over 14 years of age.

Dr. Wilkie states that the plow is a heavy affair, with harnesses attached, which were put about the shoulders of the children.

S. C. Gourd for Joe Cannon.

A dispatch from Washington under date of May 18th says: Uncle Joe Cannon is to have not only a complete outfit of wearing apparel made in South Carolina, but he is now to have a drinking gourd grown on the farm of Major John W. Holmes, editor of the Barnwell People. Representative J. O. Patterson secured this on a recent trip to Barnwell. It is a birthday present to the Speaker, but it did not arrive until to-day and will be presented with appropriate ceremony to-morrow. The gourd is an old-fashioned drinking gourd with a stem three feet long, such as we all used to drink out of from the old springs. On it will be carved, "To Uncle Joe, on his 70th birthday, from J. O. Patterson, from South Carolina." And on another place, "With which to drink from the fountain of immortal youth."

The gourd was much admired to-day at the Capitol, where it was received by Mr. Patterson, these Yankees up here never having seen anything like it and wanting to know what kind of a "squash" it was.

It is not difficult to relieve blind, bleeding, itching or protruding piles with Manzan, the great pile remedy. It is put up in collapsible tubes with nozzle, and may be introduced and applied at the seat of the trouble. Stops pain instantly. Sold by Dr. J. W. Bell, Wall-halla, W. J. Lunney, Seneca.

Burton Case Decided.

The United States Supreme Court has decided the case of the United States vs. Senator John R. Burton, of Kansas, against the defendant, affirming the decision of the Circuit Court of Kansas, by which Burton was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and fined $2,500 and deprived of the right hereafter to hold office under the government. Burton was indicted for violation of a section of the revised statutes prohibiting Senators and Representatives from receiving compensation for services before any department in Washington in which the government was interested. It was specifically charged that he received five hundred dollars a month for five months from the Rialto Grain and Securities Company for services rendered the company in an effort to prevent the issuance of an order from the Post Office Department preventing use of the mails by the company.

Wealth, a Farmer a Suicide.

Arkon, Ohio, May 18.—Allen Smith, fifty-one years of age, a prominent farmer residing near here, committed suicide to-day by shooting. Smith's fortune is estimated at $100,000. The cause for the suicide is not known.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE
Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

A Soldier's Dream.

In quarters on his little bunk,
A tired soldier lay,
He had been on guard the day before,
And came off guard that day,
And scarcely had he laid his head
Into those pillows deep
Than he succumbed to drowsiness
And soon fell fast to sleep.

And now his face is wreathed in smiles—
How happy he must be,
Some pleasant dream is pleasing him,
And now he is light and free.
But see! The smiles have changed to tears,
How swiftly they are flowing,
And now he has sprang upon his feet!
Where can he be going?

Noiseless he steps along,
Some twenty feet or more,
From his blue shirt pocket takes a key
And unlocks his locker door.
The door unlocked, he opens it,
It flies back with a whirl,
And on a panel, nailed there fast,
Was the picture of his girl.

Ah! now we know what caused those smiles,
What vision brought those tears;
He was dreaming of a boyhood love
Of a girl he had not seen for years.
He was thinking of a sweetheart
Far away o'er New England hills,
And though he gazed with lifeless eyes
His heart with rapture thrilled.

But at last his dream is ended;
We see him close the door;
He gives the little key a twist
And is off to bed once more,
But hardly has he lain there
When he sprang upon his feet
Rubs both his eyes and sings out, "Bill,
"Does the old guard stand retreat?"

Big Fee for Senator Butler.

Quite a number of the old soldiers were curious to know why Gen. M. C. Butler did not attend the reunion. His heart was with the old soldiers, but he could not possibly get away to come to Columbia. For fifty years he has been fighting in the courts on the Cherokee Indian claim, and the Supreme Court has just rendered a verdict in favor of the Indians. As one of counsel in the case Gen. Butler is very much interested in the collection of the money, out of which he is to receive a handsome fee—over $75,000 for his good self. Gen. Butler is well up on Congressional affairs, and as an appropriation must be obtained to carry out the views of the Supreme Court, he was urged to remain on the field to give his personal attention to the litigation in which he has taken such an active part, and which is now so near the end.

Gen. Butler sent his kindest regards to his old comrades, and when they heard why he could not attend they were delighted to hear of his good fortune, and only hoped that he would get into a dozen more such good cases, for they all love and admire Gen. Butler.—News and Courier.

Former Secretary of State Killed.

Columbia, May 24.—J. E. Tindal, Secretary of State when Tillman was Governor, from 1890 to 1894, died in the Columbia hospital at 4 o'clock this morning from injuries he received at midnight last night by falling from the running board of a crowded street car on Main street.

The body will be taken to his former home, in Clarendon county, for interment. Mr. Tindal was seventy-nine years old. No one seems to know just how the accident occurred.

Mr. Tindal was on his way from Clemson College, where he has been a trustee for many years, to visit his daughter, Mrs. E. C. Onatlebaum.

CATTLE FEEDING IN THE SOUTH.

C. D. JORDAN WRITES ON THE VALUE OF COTTON SEED HULLS AND MEAL.

[The Cotton Seed.]

The advantages of the South for economical cattle feeding for market are manifold.

Climatic conditions are more favorable than the more northern States, where the cattle have to go through long and rigorous winters. An abundance of forage crops can be grown, such as corn, sorghum, Kaffir corn and cowpeas. In addition to these crops of roughness, the oil mill in the near-by town has a most excellent feed in cotton seed hulls. The oil mill also supplies the cattle feeder with the finest concentrated feed in the world, viz: cotton seed meal.

Cattle feeding, like any business, must be conducted on a business-like basis. The feeder must know what are the best forage crops to grow, how to construct his silo and to cure his silage. He must know the chemical contents of his feeds and how much of the protein, carbohydrates and fat is digestible. He must know in what ratio protein and carbohydrates should be fed, for if he feeds an excess of protein, the result is the excess either goes through the cattle or the more expensive protein goes to the making of fat when this work should be done by the less expensive carbohydrates.

There should not be a deficiency of protein, for without it the animal body does not rebuild its waste and wear.

All food contains sufficient ash for the demands of the body, so the only thing which has to be considered is the digestible contents of protein, carbohydrates and fat in the feed, and the proportion in which they should be fed. The special work of protein is to supply blood, lean meat, tendons, hair, skin, etc., and the fats and carbohydrates supply the animal heat and fatty tissues.

Protein foods are the most expensive and the carbohydrates the less expensive foods. Fat is considered about 2.4 times the value of carbohydrates as a heat and fat producer, so to arrive at the nutritive ratio of any given food, multiply the number of pounds of digestible fat by 2.4 and add to the pounds of digestible carbohydrates, and divide this result by the digestible protein. For example, if a food has 2 pounds of digestible protein, 10 pounds of digestible carbohydrates and 1 pound of digestible fat, the nutritive value is 2:6.2.

Subject to some modification, dependent on original condition and length of time over which feeding extends, fattening cattle should be fed in about the following ratio: first period, 1:6.5; second period, 1:5.4; third period, 1:6.2.

A ration of 30 pounds cotton seed hulls and 6 pounds cotton seed meal would figure as follows:

DIGESTIBLE ORGANIC SUBSTANCES.
Lbs.	Protein.	Carb.	Fats.	Nutritive Ratio.
30 C. S. Hulls.....	0.09	9.93	0.51
6 C. S. Meal.....	2.23	1.24	0.73
Total.....	2.32	11.17	1.24	1 to 6

It is commonly thought that cattle should be finished off with corn, but this is not the case. The Alabama Experiment Station in bulletin 128, states that cattle fed on cotton seed meal and sorghum showed a gain of 2.23 pound per head per day and the packer's report was that they made an outturn of 54.5 per cent of dressed meat.

The Tennessee Experiment Station in 1903, fed cattle on cotton seed meal, sorghum silage, corn and cobmeal. The cotton seed meal was gradually increased to 10 or 12 pounds per day. The grain was 2.4 pounds per head per day, which compares favorably with experiments in the corn belt agricultural stations, and the dressed beef from these cattle was pronounced satisfactory for the Chicago market. In summing up this experiment which was made with cotton seed meal as the concentrate and various rough feeds the average profit showed about $8 per head in addition to the manure. In this connection: In bulletin No. 36 of the Georgia Agricultural Department issued in 1900, the statement is made that cotton seed meal and hulls loses only about 10 per cent of its manurial value in feeding.

Texas, bulletin 76, November, 1904, states that yearling steers fed on a ration of meal and hulls gained 2.59 pounds per head per day. In this bulletin the feeding of about one-fifth of a gallon of molasses per day to each steer is advocated and the statement made that an addition of this quantity of molasses to the above ration brought the gain up to 3.11 pounds per day.

No better illustration can be made of the opportunity which the South has for feeding cattle for market in competition with more northern States than the following table.

The values in this table are based on timothy hay at $20 per ton and corn at 68 cents per bushel, which are about the market values of these two commodities. A price per pound of protein, carbohydrates and fat is applied to the contents of each feed as found by published tables of chemical analysis. It is seen that cotton seed hulls and cotton seed meal and Forest City Feed Meal are selling very much below their values.

Of course, the question of digestibility enters largely into a consideration of feed values. Published tables of digestibility show cotton seed products have a high rate of digestibility and are readily assimilated by cattle:

TIMOTHY HAY, PER TON.
Protein, 120 lbs. at 3.5c. per lb.	$ 4 20
Carbohydrates, 1,480 lbs. at 1c. per lb.	14 80

Fat, 120 lbs. at 2.5c. per lb.	3 00
Value per ton.....	$31 70

One of the large packers recently made the statement that an advancing beef market is inevitable on account of the gradual restriction of Western ranges.

With abundant opportunity for growing forage crops and with the cheapest and best feeds in the near-by oil mill, the South need not be dependent on the Western-raised cattle.

Cumberlands United with Northern Church.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 24.—"I do solemnly declare and here publicly announce that the basis of reunion and union is now in full force and effect, and that the Cumberland Presbyterian church is now reunited with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America as one church."

With these words uttered before the General Assembly to-day, Moderator Hunter Corbett officially established the union of the Cumberland church with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America.

The big ecclesiastical assemblage burst into a storm of rejoicing.

Wealth Awaits This Refugee.

A recent dispatch from San Francisco says: Mrs. Andrew Nelson, a widow with nine children, who was burned out during the big fire, has inherited $250,000 through the death of her late husband's father in Sweden. Mrs. Nelson is being looked for at one of the refugee camps about the city.

Her husband was a hard-working tanner, who, when he died, left his wife destitute. She was too proud to appeal to her wealthy family, and she had a hard struggle to sustain herself and little ones. Then the fire came that swept away everything. The news that she is to inherit a big estate in Sweden will be welcome to the brave little woman.

THE CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS.

THE REUNION IN COLUMBIA A GRAND SUCCESS—A MEMORABLE OCCASION.

The reunion of Confederates in Columbia was a most enjoyable affair. Nothing was neglected to make the occasion memorable and the weather was all that could be desired. An immense multitude filled the city, but no one was turned away from the homes of the patriotic people. The State House grounds were also covered with tents and every veteran could select a home or a tent just as he pleased. The arrangements for feeding the veterans were perfect and there were rations in abundance. A great tent, capable of seating five thousand people, served as an auditorium and at times there was scarcely standing room. A fine programme had been made up and it was followed strictly, so one could hear and see what he wished and cut out the balance.

About two thousand five hundred veterans were in attendance. Some had their wives and children with them. There were more fine looking women in the city than ever known before at one time. They were well dressed, stylish and happy. The march was witnessed by thousands.

Although age is creeping on the veterans, they stepped up lively and moved forward steadily.

A beautiful picture was made by three hundred girls on the steps of the State House. They were robed in the colors of the Confederate flag and made a charming group.

Columbia always leads in such entertainments and on this occasion surpassed all her former achievements. All were lavish in their praises of the hospitality of the city and kindness of everyone.—Abbeville Medium, May 24.
